BRING YOUR OWN DEVICE FOR EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTES

ACHIEVE YOUR AMBITIONS

Supporting your business growth

Bring your own device (BYOD) for schools, provides a tailored scheme which can be implemented into your learning environments in the most cost-efficient and scalable way possible. Developed by educational experts within Wesleyan Bank, it enables you to provide your students with 1:1 learning access to laptops and tablets based on the popular 'Bring your own device' model.

The cost of the device is funded via a monthly payment scheme, paid for by parents, making this solution a cost-effective and efficient scheme for schools to implement.

Flexibility is at the heart of this ICT programme. Wesleyan Bank is independent from ICT manufacturers, so you are not restricted in your choice of device. In addition, the length of your agreement can vary from two to four years, with payments structured to suit you, your pupils and their parents. Included in the package is a full range of flexible insurance options, so you can manage the risks associated with damage, loss, or payment shortfalls.

All this is supported with expert consultation, advice and guidance from Wesleyan Bank at every stage. As a BESA member, you can be assured that Wesleyan Bank is a reliable and trusted provider to the education sector.

Perins School case study

Perins School is a Community Sport College in Hampshire for students aged 11-16, renowned in the area for its forward thinking approach to technology in the classroom. When faced with the need to acquire 200 new devices at over £111,000, Perins turned to Wesleyan Bank for support. Transparency was important from the outset for the school and parents alike as to how much this fee is going to be, and also to ensure that it is not too high that it discourages parents from entering the scheme. "I think I can say with conviction that Wesleyan Bank's partnership approach and collaboration has helped Perins to achieve our technology ambitions in the classroom, and we look forward to developing our working relationship further in the future."

Clive Surry, Perins School Business Manager
